

5th ASIA PRO BONO CONFERENCE

"The Impact of Pro Bono on Transformational Change: Working to Achieve the Sustainable Development Goals"

31st August to 1st September 2016
Draft programme *The programme is subject to change

Conference Streams:

- 1) Pro Bono Building Blocks: This stream includes sessions that create the foundations for pro bono initiatives, including the basic understanding and concept of what is pro bono. Sessions in this stream will share best practices and lessons learnt on how to do pro bono across the Asia region, how to make initiatives sustainable and how to ensure that they are effective for the target community.
- 2) Pro Bono-Walking the Walk: This stream shares the experiences and knowledge of those who work hands on with marginalized populations providing direct pro bono services. These pro bono champions share with us their first hand experiences so that we can learn, be inspired, walk with them on their journey and apply their lessons and experience to other Pro Bono initiatives.
- 3) Strengthening a Pro Bono Culture: This stream includes sessions that discuss the motivations and reasons behind why, when, where, how we do pro bono, how we can gain further support and develop the pro bono Movement nationally, throughout Asia, and Globally.

	Professor Chris Walsh (James Cook University & BABSEACLE) This full-day interactive and collaborative workshop provides an introduction to planning, monitoring and evaluating for development results. In our climate of high public accountability—where we must strive to meet the UN’s 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs)—M&E can no longer be viewed in terms of an organisation’s internal performance in regards to measuring progress in completing activities to measure impact and outcome indicators. In this workshop, participants will learn about ‘managing for development results’ or MfDR, which is planning robust M&E to demonstrate real and meaningful results in the quality of people’s lives. This is markedly different from M&E that measures internal results and the performance of an organization. The 4-session collaborative workshop will explore putting planning, monitoring and evaluation together in a Results-Based management (RBM) approach, as well as designing a framework to carry out M&E systematically and successfully.
	Workshop 3: Ethical Practice of Client Centered Legal Aid Lawyer This workshop will explore the concept of client-centered legal aid lawyering as a means of ensuring access to justice and furthering the objectives of creating transformational change. With reference to a range of holistic teachings and core legal skills and values the workshop will focus on how lawyers can achieve the objective of acting in a client’s best interests while ensuring a client’s ethical well-being
	Workshop 4: Case Management Best Practices The two-part workshop on Case Management Best Practices will draw upon the diverse experiences of Conference participants to offer an informative session on why case management is essential to access to justice and how it can be improved through pro bono activities. Workshop facilitators will foster discussion on the purposes of case management and what kinds of tools must be used to reach those goals. Case management tools used in different legal settings will be provided as examples to stimulate discussion on how case management is different in the contexts of legal aid, corporate law firms, university in-house consultation clinics, public interest law firms and other settings. Discussion will also focus on how these different sectors can work together to strengthen case management for the improvement of access to justice.
	Workshop 5: Indonesian Lawyers Working with Marginalised Populations and Best ways to Provide Pro Bono Services This workshop will share best practises for Indonesian lawyers to provide pro bono services to marginalised communities.
